District Director

Community Corrections

The Eighth Judicial District Department of Correctional Services offers a wide variety of career options, as well as opportunities for advancement, for college graduates interested in working in the criminal justice system. Last year we employed 111 staff members and supervised nearly 3,000 probationers and parolees in southeast Iowa.

Our mission is critical in keeping communities safe by offering a continuum of services ranging from probation and parole services and residential supervision to special treatment programs designed to provide offenders with opportunities to make positive changes in their lives.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Specialized treatment programs provide offenders the skills necessary to lead productive, crime-free lives. Employment opportunities exist for probation and parole officers serving in the Eighth District's Sex Offender Treatment Programs, Drug Courts, Mental Health Court, Reentry Program, and Iowa Domestic Abuse Program. Other positions include ILEA-certified officers in the High Risk Unit, who conduct home visits and office safety checks, a victim services provider, and a psychologist.

RESIDENTIAL SUPERVISION

The Eighth District maintains residential correctional facilities in Burlington and Ottumwa, respectively. The facilities are staffed by residential officers charged with monitoring offenders as they transition back to their communities from prison, or after being ordered to a facility as a sanction. Residential officers administer drug and alcohol tests and conduct employment, treatment and furlough checks, as well as monitor general offender compliance. Internships are available.

PROBATION AND PAROLE

Probation and parole officers in the Eighth District are located throughout 14 counties in southeast Iowa with the primary offices located in Burlington and Ottumwa. Probation and parole officers conduct regularly scheduled face-to-face meetings with offenders, develop individual case plans based on ongoing risk and needs assessments, and are ultimately responsible for monitoring offender compliance with all supervision and treatment conditions established by the courts.
